the Campbell Automatic Stock Annunciator Was Operated. The investigation into the working of Mr. Campbell's machine which automatically announces the fluctua-tions in stocks, was proceeded with in the Criminal Court this morning. Wm. Dickson took the stand and testi fied that he had been in the place sev eral times and had bought 100 shares of Southern Arizona mining stock (one of the machine's quotations). He had seen bankers and brokers and other prominent business men there, among them P. Campbell, J. Ledyard Hodge Mr. Walsh and others.

Mr. Worthington saked what induced him to purchase Arizons Southern stock. "In reply to that I will say that my dealings there were founded on faith, sustained by hope and sanctified sometimes by a little charity."

"I wish to know what investigation you made, without any reference to faith, hope or charity, Mr. Dickson."

"I thought it was a good investment. I saw that the company was incorporated in New York, and I knew that the laws of that State protect the corporations formed under them."

He went on to say in response to questions that Mr. Campibell told him that the stock was a good investment and that ho was prepared to soil it in any quantity. He could almost guarantee a purchase against loss on the investment. He held the Southern Arizona stock from a week to ten days. He had slips with the quotations of that stock seet him at his office. He knew that these quotations came from the machine. The prices during that time had varied eight or ten points. At length he found that he could close out at a profit and did so at a fraction of a per cent, over what he paid, "You asked me the names of some of the people I saw there," said Mr. Dickson at the close of his testimony. "I desire to add the names of Frank I'. Middleton, and Edwin M. Nourse."

James A. Breen, formerly a telegraph operator in Mr. Campbell's office, who also had charge of a branch of the business, stated that he knew of transfers of stock to Mr. Dickson. He also stated that the mode of transacting husiness in Mr. Campbell's office was precisely the same, according to his understanding, as in other offices. Mr. Worthington then asked who wound up the machine. The clock, in striking every baif minute, operated so as to cause that the stock were the same as the transactions over the titcher. What did you mean by that? That there was no stock intended to be delivered?"

"You said that the ransactions in the machine atocks were the esame as the transactions over the titcher."

What did the same as the transactions over the titcher.

A dispatch was received here last night, stating that William M. Jensen, alias Vigo M. J. Ross, had committed suicide by shooting himself in the head, in a fifteencent Yearl-at lodging house, N. Y. Letters found in his person indicated that he was driven to the deed by starvation.

Jensen is evidently the notorious body-snatcher. He is well-known to the Washington and Baltimore authorities, where he has robbed many a grave. He served two terms of a year each in this city for hody-snatcher, and, when he has robbed many a grave. He served two terms of a year each in this city for hody-snatching. He had some knowledge of medicine, and, while in the Jall, he was allowed to handle medicine and he was given liberties that the other prisoners did not suicy. He made the acquaintance of a woman in the Jall, and, when he got out, he started a scandal about the grards and fermale prisoners in the Jall.

He made no secret of his busicess as a body-snatcher, and he and Dr. Crow gave an exhibition at the Theatre Comique of opening a grave and pulling a dummy curpse out of the ground.

He stole the hody of Charles Shaw, the negro munderer, from Potters' fisid and carried it from one medical college to nother in a hack, and, not being able to get a good price for it, he dumped the curpe into the street and left it there.
